

History of Perry County, Pennsylvania, Including Descriptions of Indian and Pioneer Life from the Time of Earliest Settlement Sketches of Its Noted Men and Women and Many Professional Men, By H. H. Hain, Harrisburg, Pa., 1922 - Hain-Moore Company, Publishers, Harrisburg, Pa.

Samuel F. Stambaugh was born in Jackson Township, December 10, 1846, the son of John and Sarah Heim (Foust) Stambaugh. He attended the Mt. Pleasant and Blain schools, and was one of the first Perry Countians to take a business course, immediately after his term of enlistment in the Union Army, at Eastman Business College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. He then located at Shelby, Ohio, where he has resided ever since, save for six years, when he was the owner and publisher of the Atchison (Kansas) Daily Patriot. There his son Carlton learned the newspaper and printing business, and afterwards, in connection with his uncle, John B. Stambaugh, became the founder of the Daily Globe at Shelby, Ohio, which he still publishes, and which is a valuable property. Returning to Shelby Mr. Stambaugh became a pension attorney and established a real estate agency, which is today the leading one in Shelby. As an assistant in S. S. Bloom's law office he became familiar with legal procedure, and, according to the judge of the probate court, he drafts more wills than any man in Richland County, Ohio. He was married to Miss Mary E. Moore, of Shelby, Ohio, who passed away December 25, 1909. Three children were born, John Carlton, Mary Grace, and Luther Earl, the latter dying from the effects of having his chest crushed in at a cane rush at Kenyon College. Mr. Stambaugh was the first secretary of the Sunday school connected with the Lutheran Church at Shelby, which today has an edifice costing $100,000, and which organization was formed by persons, of whom eighty per cent were descendants of those who were members of "Father" Heim's churches and lived in Perry County. As commander of the Third Troop of the Ohio National Guard for five years Mr. Stambaugh personally equipped his command with Smith & Wesson carbines, sabres, and accoutrements, from his personal funds. He is the only survivor of the first board of directors of the First National Bank of Shelby.
